

Bridgend youngster wins top charity award

Megan Crombie-Davies, winner of the Tenovus Young Volunteer Award, is pictured with WPD's Distribution Manager Ian Lawrence (left) and ITV presenter and Patron of the charity, Carl Edwards.

A twelve-year-old girl from Bridgend has been named Young Volunteer of the Year by charity Tenovus Cancer Care.

Megan Crombie-Davies, secured the coveted title at the Tenovus Volunteer Awards ceremony held at the Principality Stadium, Cardiff. ITV presenter and Patron of the charity, Carl Edwards, hosted the event which was sponsored by Western Power Distribution (WPD).

The Awards recognise and celebrate volunteers who give up their time and skills to support the charity, which currently has more than 2,000 volunteers across Wales and England. In the last year they have provided 300,000 hours for fundraising, volunteering in shops and at events, or helping to run support services.

Megan has been a fund-raiser and member of the charity's Sing with Us choir since losing her grandfather to cancer in 2013, when she was eight-years-old. During that time she has raised cash by manning stalls, taking part in bucket collections and baking cakes, and has even completed several five and ten mile walks.

WPD Distribution Manager, Ian Lawrence who presented Megan with her award said: "She thoroughly deserves this accolade. She's a great fund-raiser and it's good to see someone so young show so much determination and commitment to such a worthy cause."

<https://news.pplweb.com/news-releases?item=137375%3FasPDF%3D1>